GRANDCARE HOME HEALTH SERVICES EXCELS IN ACUTE WOUND CARE

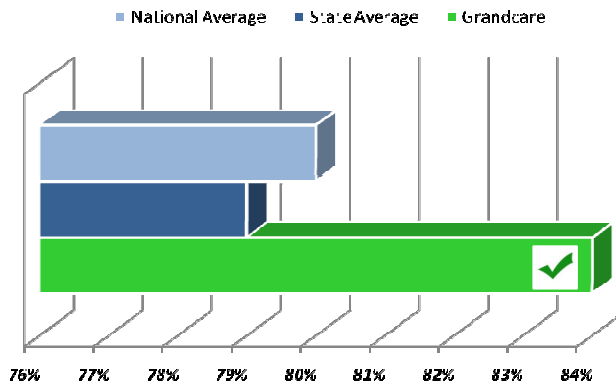

Glendale, CA – June 15, 2009 – Grandcare Home Health (“Grandcare”), a regional leading provider of acute care home health services, today announced its superior ratings in wound care treatment.

Grandcare’s dedicated management team of health care professionals includes Nurmina Banaag and Ernesto Molina. Ms. Banaag is a Registered Nurse with over 30 years of medical experience, including over 10 years overseeing the nursing department at the University of Southern California Hospital’s Acute In-Patient Rehabilitation Center. Ms. Banaag is also a Certified Rehabilitation Registered Nurse and counts on significant experience in acute care and post-operative orthopedic, neurological and cardiac rehabilitative care. Mr. Molina also has over 30 years of medical experience and holds a doctorate in medicine with a specialty in pulmonology. Mr. Molina, the company’s Director of Patient Care Services, is a practicing Registered Nurse.

The company’s wound care program has been tailored to ensure the effective treatment and healing of acute and/or chronic wounds. Grandcare’s success in acute wound care treatment is evidenced by the company’s consistent high ratings compared to state and national averages for home health agencies.

Per the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services’ Home Health Compare quality program, Grandcare excels in improving or healing existing wounds, and, in minimizing the occurrence of unplanned medical care related to a new or worsening wound.

Lydia, a family member of a Grandcare acute wound care patient, commented “The care that we received from Grandcare was nothing short of exceptional. Grandcare’s staff transformed a room in my father’s home into a mini-ICU, complete with respiratory machines and a wound VAC system. The skilled nurses were able to heal my father’s severe wound shortly after he transferred home, even though my father had spent six months at the hospital where the wound remained opened.”
